

DARCHAI NOAM - דרכי נועם

“Its ways are ways of pleasantness”

(Mishlei 3:17)

Chukat, July 2016

www.divreitorah.net/darchai-noam

darchai.noam@gmail.com

How can the Parsha help us grow this week?

Chukat – a tzaddik in a fur coat

In this week's Parsha of Chukat, we read about the law of the Parah Adumah – the red cow that was used in the procedure for purifying people from tumat met (the impurity associated with a dead body).

Ironically, the same ashes of the Parah Adumah that were used to make someone pure, made the people involved in preparing the ashes impure!<sup>1</sup> How could the same ashes cause an impure person to become pure and a pure person to become impure? Rav Soloveitchik explains that a tamei individual can be compared to a person sinking in quicksand. His rescuers inevitably become soiled in the process of rescuing him.<sup>2</sup>

But why would someone willingly get involved in preparing the ashes of the Parah Adumah if they know that it would cause them to become impure? We can answer this based on a fundamental principle of Judaism: “kol Yisrael arevim zeh bazeh” – all Jewish people are responsible for each other. That is why Jewish people are often willing to help each other even at the cost of self-sacrifice.

This idea is relevant to people involved in kiruv. In order to bring an unaffiliated Jew back to the right path, one may need to expose oneself to negative influences. This suggests that sometimes we may need to compromise our own level of purity to a degree in order to help our fellow Jews.<sup>3</sup>

This principle of “kol Yisrael arevim zeh bazeh” has a very practical application, as can be seen from a beautiful halacha brought by the Mishnah Berurah.

But first we need some background to the halacha. If two or more people are eating together, one person can say the bracha over the food on behalf of the other people. The other people thereby discharge their obligation to say the bracha just by listening to the bracha being recited, provided that they all have in mind that the bracha is being recited on everyone's behalf.<sup>4</sup> However, the Shulchan Aruch<sup>5</sup> rules that this only works if the person reciting the bracha will be eating with the others. If he is not eating then he is not obligated to recite a bracha and he therefore cannot satisfy the obligation of the other people to recite a bracha. The Mishnah Berurah clarifies that this condition only applies to brachot over food and drink and the like. However with brachot over mitzvot (such as kiddush or havdala) the principle of kol Yisrael arevim zeh bazeh applies. Even if I have already satisfied my own obligation for this particular mitzvah, if my friend has not yet performed the mitzvah then it is as if my performance of the mitzvah is lacking. I can therefore recite the bracha again for my friend. I am responsible for my friend's obligation to perform the mitzvah.

<sup>1</sup> Sefer Hachinuch, mitzvah 397. Note that the people involved in the preparations did not become impure to the same degree as the people whose impurity was being removed by the procedure.

<sup>2</sup> See: http://www.ou.org/torah/machshava/tzarich-iyun/tzarich\_iyun\_the\_parah\_adumah/

<sup>3</sup> As an aside, the extent to which one becomes involved in kiruv is a complicated and delicate question which requires much thought and guidance. The answer will partly depend on how strong one is in their own belief. Also, having certain people in our homes may be a negative influence for our children.

<sup>4</sup> It is preferable, although not obligatory, for the other people to say amen to the bracha.

<sup>5</sup> Orach Chaim 113:14.

We can learn an amazing principle from this. Our mitzvah performance is only really complete if other members of Bnei Yisrael also perform the mitzvah. This means that it is not enough for us to just focus on our own spiritual growth. We need to be concerned about the spiritual growth of each other.

The Kotzker Rebbe<sup>6</sup> once referred to someone as a “tzaddik in peltz” – “a righteous person in a fur coat”. There are two options to warm ourselves up if it is freezing outside. We can light a fire or we can put on a warm coat. Whereas a fire warms everyone else as well, a warm coat only warms the wearer. Someone concerned only with their own spiritual growth can thus be compared to a tzaddik in a fur coat.

On the other hand, as we mentioned above, getting involved in kiruv work does come with risks. Just like the people involved in preparing the ashes of the Parah Adumah, the exposure to negative influences can have a detrimental effect.

Perhaps we can extract an answer to this conundrum from the laws of salting meat. A few generations ago, before the modern convenience of kosher butchers, most Jewish housewives knew how to salt meat. The salt draws the blood out of the meat and ensures that the meat is permissible to eat according to the laws of kashrut. The Rabbis asked whether it is permissible to salt many pieces of meat together. Perhaps the blood that is flowing out of one piece of meat will get absorbed into another piece of meat, thus rendering it forbidden? The Shulchan Aruch<sup>7</sup> rules that it is permitted. One of the reasons is that salt causes juices to flow out of the meat for quite some time. As long as there is juice flowing out of a piece of meat, nothing else can flow into that piece.<sup>8</sup>

Perhaps that is the secret to successful kiruv without becoming tainted. If one is constantly involved in spreading the light of Judaism and teaching Torah, the spiritual juice is flowing out and there is thus no room for negative influences to flow in.

The principle of kol Yisrael arevim zeh bazeh applies to all of us. We are all a klal, and when one part of the community suffers, we all suffer. If this applies to physical suffering, then how much more so should it apply spiritually? Though kiruv work per se may not be appropriate for all and the dangers of tainting ourselves may outweigh the benefits, we can still strive to purify others on some level.

Let's try something this week:

1. Remember that we are all responsible for each other – this includes concerning ourselves with each other's spiritual wellbeing as well as their physical situation.
2. Once we satisfy our obligation in relation to a certain mitzvah, remember that our performance is still lacking until we can help others to perform the mitzvah as well.

Shabbat shalom, Rabbi Ledder

Darchai Noam is now available online at www.divreitorah.net/darchai-noam. You can access this week's edition of Darchai Noam, archived back issues of Darchai Noam and other divrei Torah.

Note: as the majority of our readers are located outside of Eretz Yisrael we will be following the calendar of Parshiyot for L'Aretz.

*** **

---

<sup>6</sup> 1787-1859.

<sup>7</sup> Yoreh Deah 70:1.

<sup>8</sup> This principle is known as “idi d'tarid liflot tzir, lo bala” - while the meat is engaged in giving off tzir (meat juices) it will not absorb [blood].

About Darchai Noam

The pasuk in Mishlei (3:17) describes the Torah as follows: "Its ways are ways of pleasantness (Darchai Noam) and all its paths are peace". The Torah is our guidebook for life. It is packed full of good advice as to how we should live our lives.

The aim of the Darchai Noam weekly email is to examine an idea from the weekly parashah relating to good middot (character traits). It will focus particularly on treating each other with respect and how to interact with each other in a more peaceful and pleasant manner. It will also suggest some practical tips for implementing these ideas in our daily lives.

By learning together each week, and making an effort to regularly put the ideas into practice, with Hashem's help we can all gradually improve our character traits and our observance of 'v'ahavta l're'echa kamocho' – loving one's fellow as oneself.

If you know someone who might enjoy receiving this email please feel free to pass it on to them or email me their details so I can add them to the subscription list.

You are welcome to use the content of this email in any way that will help to spread the learning of Torah. However please attribute credit appropriately.

Many of the ideas that I use in Darchai Noam are based on ideas that I read or heard from various sources. Where possible I try to quote the source. However in some cases I cannot recall the source. For that I apologise. If I do discuss an idea that I heard from somewhere else, any errors are purely my own.

How to subscribe or unsubscribe

If you would like to subscribe or unsubscribe to Darchai Noam, please send an email to darchai.noam@gmail.com with the word 'subscribe' or 'unsubscribe' in the subject.